MEDICAL.

THE UNFORTUNATE.

REMEDIES' NEW REMEDIES!

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

623 KEARNEY STREET, COR. COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

[GIB]BON has the pleasure of announcing that [he has retu]rned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearney street, corner of Commercial, [San Franci]sco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him. [The Doct]or has spared neither time nor money in [obtaining] new remedies and has returned with [every fa]cilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

[Ma]ny thousands of persons both male [and female] there who are suffering out a miserable [life fr]om the effects of secret indulgences, or [diseases] absorbed into the system! Look at their [wretched] and disfigured faces and their [shattered] constitutions, disqualifying them for [the duti]es of marriage or the enjoyment of life, [and in th]is situation thousands suffer until death [ends the s]cene. Let parents, guardians, friends, [and tho]se who are suffering with any of these [lif]e-destroying maladies—see that they are [treate]d and cured before it be too late. Send them [direct]ly to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has [made th]ese diseases his especial study for years, [and is] certain to cure the most inveterate cases [without m]ercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted or to those who [are inter]ested in the welfare of their friends to be[ware of] the many pretended doctors who infest [the city, p]ublishing their skill in curing all diseases, [and] imposing upon the public by using [the names] of eminent physicians from Europe and [America]. Be therefore careful and make strict [inquiry, or] you may fall into the hands of those [illegible].

Seminal Weakness.

[E]missions, the consequence of self abuse, [or an]y vice of depraved sexual indulgence, is [practiced b]y the youth of both sexes to an almost [incredible] extent, producing with unerring certainty [the foll]owing train of morbid symptoms, unless [combatted] by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallowness, dark spots under the eyes, pain in [the head, r]inging in the ears, noise like the rustling [of leaves a]nd rattling of chariots, uneasiness about [the loins, w]eakness of the limbs, confused vision, [dullness of in]tellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in [approachin]g strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, [h]ectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions [abou]t the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, [con]sumption, night sweats, monomania and [often in]sanity. If relief be not obtained should [consult imm]ediately either in person or by letter, and [have a cure] effected by his new and scientific mode [of treating] this disease, which never fails of effecting a [speedy] and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One [Hundred] Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by [any of] the San Francisco quacks.

Married Men,

[Or th]ose contemplating marriage, who are suffering [from] any of these fearful maladies, should not [incur the] sacred responsibility resting upon them [without first] obtaining immediate relief. [DR. GIB]BON is responsible, and will give to each [patient a w]ritten instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

Cured at Home.

[Patients] at a distance may be CURED AT HOME by [address]ing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, [name, age,] length of time the disease has continued, [and have] medicines promptly forwarded free from [damage an]d curiosity, to any part of the country, [with full] and plain directions. By inclosing Ten [Dollars] in registered letter through the Post-[office, or th]rough Wells Fargo & Co., a package of [medicine] will be forwarded to any part of the [Union. A]ll communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

[Beware] of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders, who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe [the publi]c. Some of the self-styled doctors, whose [names are] to be found in the daily and weekly [papers] of San Francisco and other places, are [those who] became too lazy to work at their [former trades, so]me are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper [vendors,] intelligence office keepers, etc. The only [safeguard against] imposition is to make inquiry—it will [cost nothing,] and may save you many regrets; [in] visiting physicians, in eight cases out of [ten] there is no safety in trusting any of them [unless] you know who and what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus [certi]ficates, pretended patients' letters, etc. [He] will satisfy persons who may call at his [office as to his] ability to treat diseases that he proposes [to cure].

DR. J. F. GIBBON 623 Kearney street, cor[ner Comme]rcial, San Francisco, Postoffice Box 1,957. [REMEMB]ER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER. [Cons]ultations FREE. [Corres]pondents will please inform DR. GIBBON [where the]y read his advertisement in the DAILY [OREGONIAN]. jy6d4p

CONGRESSIONAL.

Washington, Feb 17—In the Senate, Logan introduced a bill establishing rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States. Referred.

Howe called up his motion to reconsider the vote passing the bill granting a site for the Peabody school at St. Augustine, Florida, and it was agreed to, 31 to 2[illegible]. Boreman, Gilbert, Lewis, Morrill of Vermont, Sargent, Sherman, Sprague and Tipton voting with the Democrats in the negative.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution for the admission of Pinchback.

Morton requested the Senate to remain in session till the question was disposed of.

Ferry of Connecticut opposed the proposition as it would deprive many senators of a hearing on the question.

Sargent then resumed the floor and concluded the argument.

At the conclusion of Sargent's remarks, Ferry of Connecticut, in a fifteen minutes speech, appealed to the senators not to set a precedent so dangerous to Republican institutions as the admission of a man whose credentials were signed by and whose only title to the office of Governor was acquired by fraud, perjury and usurpation. He had listened with pain to members of the dominant party in the Senate quoting from the record of pro-slavery times as an excuse for similar atrocities to be perpetrated by the Republican party. He believed if senators would vote according to their honest convictions this precedent would not be established.

Stevenson spoke in opposition to the resolution, and quoted from testimony taken by the Senate committee in 1870 and report made thereon. He reviewed and denounced the action of Durell and the telegram of Attorney General Williams to Marshal Packard ordering him to enforce the action.

At the conclusion of Stevenson's speech Howe obtained the floor, and on motion of Morton the Senate by a vote of 38 to 12 took a recess till 7:30.

At evening session Howe made an argument in favor of the resolution admitting Pinchback.

Hamilton moved to amend the resolution by inserting the word "not," so that it read "Pinchback be not admitted," etc.

Motion to adjourn lost—23 to 36.

Washington, Feb 17—In the House, in the regular order, the bill in regard to the election of President and Vice President was called for.

Randall wanted the army appropriation bill considered, but on motion of Dawes the House went into committee of the whole on the tariff bill by a vote of 90 to 56. Debate was limited to three quarters of an hour.

Burchard made a long statistical speech in favor of the bill, except the portion relating to the horizontal (?) 10 per cent. tax.

Banning and Cox opposed the increased tax on whisky, holding that the higher the duty the less revenue is collected.

Chittenden denounced the bill as a comprehensive blunder, and in the name of civilized commerce protested against any tariff bill this session unless it included tea and coffee.

Harris, Bright, Niblack, Beck and Ward, of Illinois, also spoke opposing the bill.

Kasson closed the general debate in a speech appealing to the patriotism of members to uphold the credit or good faith of the government. The committee then proceeded to consider the bill under the five minutes rule.

Southard of Ohio moved to strike out the first section of the bill.

Taylor of Ohio, opposed the motion and protested against the section, as an unjust discrimination against the Western States in the interest of others which did not bear their equal burden of taxation. Cincinnati alone contributed from whisky and tobacco between seven and eight millions of dollars, which is about double that paid by all of New England, for the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky paid three fifths of all the excise tax collected.

Garfield offered a substitute to the first section—to tax whisky 80 cents a gallon, but not tax the stock on hand.

Cox moved to amend the section by increasing the duties on champagne from $6 to $9 per dozen on quarts and from $4 to $4 50 per dozen on pints, and said it would produce an increase of the revenue of $676,000. The amendment was agreed to.

Ward of Ill. said the income tax was the only form of taxation that would reach the mass.

Dawes said if Ward would propose it he would vote for it. He always opposed its repeal.

Burchard opposed Garfield's substitute and favored a tax of $1 a gallon.

Garfield modified his substitute so as to make the tax $1.

Kelly moved to amend by exempting spirits specially prepared for use in the arts. Rejected.

Gunckle moved to amend Garfield's substitute by taxing the stock on hand. Agreed.

The substitute was then rejected, leaving the section as it came from the committee except the amendment increasing the duty on champagne.

The committee rose and the House took a recess till 7:30 P. M., the evening session to be for business from the judicial committee, excluding political measures.

At the House evening session a number of bills from the judiciary committee were reported and passed.

Butler's postal telegraph bill was reached, when a point of order was raised by Willard [illegible] supported by Garfield and Randall that it should receive the first consideration in committee of the whole. The speaker overruled the point and Butler proceeded to explain [illegible]. He attacked the Associated Press and the Western Union Telegraph Co. as monopolies that sought to control the news business of the country.

Pierce of Massachusetts asked his colleague if it was intended that the 7th section of the bill providing for divulging telegraphic intelligence should be retrospective so as to punish persons who intercepted and divulged dispatches sent to and from Washington say a year ago.

This caused some laughter as Butler replied in the negative.

Merriam of New York said the bill embodied the most monstrous proposition presented to the House in many a day. He thought the title should be changed to a bill to enable a rival telegraph company to make a profit of the Western Union Telegraph Co. without it rendering any service therefor. He sent to the clerk's desk and had read a long communication from President Orton of the Western Union Co. criticising details of the bill and denouncing it as a stock jobbing movement.

Butler moved the previous question, which the House refused to second—89 to 77, not two thirds in the affirmative.

Potter of New York, characterized the bill as most extraordinary [illegible] telegraph lines [illegible] proper [illegible] subsidized by the government [illegible] never [illegible] authority of the government yet it was [illegible] that Congress should take possession of private property, manage it and take profit of it.

A bill was reported from the judiciary committee [illegible]

[illegible] pro rata [illegible] by act of the Territorial legislature of the 13th of January [illegible] for the incorporation of a [illegible] was passed.

The House committee on foreign affairs to-day authorized Myers to report a bill [illegible] existing laws on the subject of immigration of Coolie [illegible] from granting permits to vessels [illegible] immigrants from Oriental countries who have entered into contracts for immoral purposes, provides penalties [illegible] imprisonment against any person employing or holding women under contract for prostitution [illegible] heavy penalties [illegible] into the United States any coolie [illegible] or [illegible] involuntary coolie labor or endeavoring to hold coolies under such contracts, and all such contracts are to be declared void. The bill also prohibits the landing in the United States of felons undergoing sentence for non-political crimes or whose sentence has been remitted on condition of their emigration, and of women imported for purposes of prostitution, and provides that all vessels shall be subject to inspection to ascertain whether any such persons are on board. Bonds may however be given by the master or owners of any vessel to permit the landing of such persons conditioned upon his or her return within six months to the country whence brought. Any violation of this act will subject the vessel to forfeiture. The bill, though prepared by Myers and perfected by the committee, is largely based upon various measures introduced by Page of California, to which State its provisions will mainly apply.

The select committee on Alabama affairs to-day by a majority vote directed the chairman to report to the House the bill recently indorsed by the Republican caucus. Buckner and Luttrell of the committee protested against this action, insisting that the committee should first endeavor to agree upon and report concerning the special subject of their investigation.

THE TILTON-BEECHER CASE.

More of Tilton.

New York, Feb 17—In the Beecher case this forenoon the redirect examination of Tilton was resumed. He said he could not fix the precise date of the chance interview between himself and wife when Bessie Turner was present and heard the whole story, but thought it was after Mrs. Tilton's return from Marietta. Evarts objected to this answer on the ground that nothing about this matter had been elicited by any question to which he [illegible] in the re-cross examination. Fullerton contended that the matter had been brought out by the [illegible] and Evarts replied that it was not elicited by a direct question. The court allowed the question and witness continued. He thought it was in the afternoon of the day Mrs. Tilton returned from Marietta. Witness was asked what the whole story was. Evarts objected and the court ruled the question out. Witness then testified that the suggestion of Beecher's visit to Mrs. Tilton after the writing of her letter of confession came from Beecher. A argument ensued between counsel as to the right of witness to explain the seeming inconsistency between this answer and that given in cross examination when he testified to saying to Beecher: "You can go to the house and see Elizabeth as it is only a few steps." Witness was allowed to explain. He made the latter remark after Beecher's proposition to visit her. Witness continued—My wife told Mrs. Morse and she was almost wild about it. Evarts objected to this answer, but the court allowed it to stand. Witness said that he considered the $7,000 received from Bowen on the arbitration his just dues. He was questioned about young Rousell, the communist, in whose honor the procession was formed in New York, and said he knew he was not concerned in the death of the Archbishop of Paris.

Mrs. Tilton proposed his taking the young school girl to Connecticut with him for the benefit of her health when he went on a lecturing tour. He thought the age of the girl about 16 or 17.

Mrs. Woodhull's husband was always present during witness' visits there. Mrs. Woodhull's demeanor was always that of a lady and that of her husband that of a perfect gentleman. Witness remembered Kate Cary who testified yesterday as a former servant of Mrs. Tilton. Did not know whether or not she went to Monticello with Mrs. Tilton.

Fullerton offered two letters written by Mrs. Tilton from Monticello to her husband to fix the date of her sojourn there. Evarts objected and pending the argument a recess was taken.

After recess the argument of counsel over the admission of the letters which was interrupted by recess was continued; at the close the court decided to admit the letters. This concluded the redirect examination and Evarts proceeded to re-cross examination. Witness testified he never wrote and delivered on a lecturing tour in the West a lecture on marriage and divorce. He spoke when requested on the subject. He delivered the lecture to students of Cornell University by request and also before the students of the seminary at Bloomington, Indiana. In it he didn't tell his hearers to follow the laws of nature, nor did he denounce the interference of the church. He never said if he had his way he would crush churches and States, or that it was the duty of the State to regulate prostitution. He was taught the strict principles of morality and had always retained these ideas. The payment of the $7,000 by Bowen had nothing to do with signing the tripartite agreement. It was paid two days before signing the agreement. Witness presented a check he received from Bowen. It was dated April [illegible] and Evarts read it and offered it in evidence. Bowen owed witness $7,000, and paid it because he owed it and for no other reason. The young girl who accompanied him to Winsted county was a friend and companion of his daughter Florence. She was a fair sized girl about sixteen or seventeen years old. By Mrs. Woodhull's husband he meant Col. Blood. No other portraits were found in the closet where Beecher's photographs were found. He never saw any photographs of Rev. Dr. Taylor, Rev. Dr. Storrs or Horace Greeley in his wife's possession. He didn't give those photographs of Beecher to his wife. Don't know how long these things were in the closet. Didn't know of Beecher giving Mrs. Tilton any books except "Life Thoughts" and "Norwood." A pile of books he found in the closet were inscribed by Beecher and were copies of his publications. He wasn't aware that Beecher was in the habit of distributing his books among parishioners. Wasn't aware how [illegible] them [illegible] as he seldom visited them or even attended their funerals. Wasn't aware that the books were found and lay on the table until they were put into the closet when his wife was making preparations to take in boarders. Don't recall any gentleman calling on his wife when she was ill. Never heard of Beecher being in her bed room when she was ill until he heard it testified yesterday.

Evarts announced the cross-examination closed and the court adjourned.

Just previous to adjournment one of the jurors was taken suddenly faint and sick, and after adjournment he was taken home in a carriage.

The most interesting feature in the Beecher trial to-day was the struggle between Fullerton and Evarts, the former to put questions to Tilton and the latter to have them excluded, objecting to every question asked. His most signal success was in excluding the answer to the question as to what Bessie Turner overheard between Tilton and wife when Mrs. Tilton said in cross examination in answer to Evarts' question as to whom he told the story of his wife's adultery she (Bessie) overheard the whole story.

SOUTHWEST OREGON

A correspondent of the San Francisco Alta who has been traveling in the southwestern portion of our State speaks very highly of its resources and says:

There is no portion of this coast that possesses so great and varied riches as Southern Oregon—climate, soil, timber, mineral wealth and inexhaustible water power, convenient to the coast. The climate is mild and temperate—never subjected to drought, having sufficient rain, yet rarely too much. Short crops seldom or rarely occur. The soil is very rich and fertile, yielding rich returns to the agriculturist. Rogue River valley in the vicinity of Jacksonville cannot be surpassed for the culture of most varieties of grape, and for the peach no country can surpass, even if they can equal it. Wheat at this time could not be sold for twenty cents per cental, there being no demand, and immense quantities were thrown open to stock or fed off in the fields. From the upper valley to the mouth of the river immense deposits of mineral crop out—copper, chrome and iron—extensive ledges of variegated marble and limestone. There are no serious hindrances to the construction of a

RAILROAD FROM THE COAST

to Klamath lake, but that country is in Oregon. The capability of that portion of the State when developed would give ten times the support to a road than is now given by the Wallamet, as the latter can only furnish the agricultural products of that valley for the support of a road. Again, all the intervening country between the coast to the upper valley on the north side of the river is clothed with the most luxuriant pasturage, capable of supporting innumerable herds of sheep, the wool of which could be manufactured immediately upon the line of the road. I am informed by a reliable gentleman that there is a large deposit of coal upon a creek called Shasta Corta, one mile from the river, being six feet thick, and where pieces solid and firm, [illegible] posed, lie in the creek, weighing from five to ten hundred pounds, broken off of the ledge. Rogue river runs nearly a due east course from the ocean to its source, and on nearly a direct line from the coast to Jacksonville. The south side of the river is heavily timbered with yellow fir and sugar pine, the latter very abundant in the upper portions of the valley. On Galice creek, emptying into the river 60 miles from the coast and contiguous to the river, fabulous—

RICH GOLD QUARTZ LODES

have been recently discovered, machinery for the working of which has been purchased recently in San Francisco, and by the time you receive this will be on the ground. The river and its tributaries have yielded annually large amounts of the precious metals. I will say before leaving this portion of the State, that did it belong to California it would have been far in advance of what it is now. It would have been connected with the coast by a railroad; its varied resources developed, thereby opening up industries now unthought of. In passing up that river last fall I was astonished at the number and extent of the copper and chrome ledges and mineral indications. The country south of the river becomes more rugged and mountainous. At the mouth of the river are two extensive both having done well the past season. Of the entrance, I cannot say much in its favor. It will answer for vessels of the class required for the shipment of their fish, but can be of no importance as a lumbering port, not admitting vessels of sufficient size for that trade.

The coast north of the river is principally adapted to sheep raising, the grass remaining green the entire year, having sufficient sheep to consume the feed, and may be said to be overstocked. As you approach Port Orford the face of the country changes. You then enter the cedar belt, with heavy detached bodies of live oak. The creek bottoms are very rich, with heavy growths of laurel (or myrtle as it is called there), also large maple, with every kind of grain well adapted for future use. I should have stated that all the bottoms on Rogue river have the same varieties.

Having read the piece published in the Alta two years since, of "When and where shall we have a breakwater," I took a thorough look, and as far as able examined from all sides, weighed all advantages and disadvantages of the place, and will now give you in brief my views in regard to

PORT ORFORD.

Of course I entered into an examination of the depth of water at [illegible] as about [illegible] can only be seen to advantage by going out upon the extreme height of the Heads. Fronting the western side of the harbor, having 20 [illegible] of water [illegible] from that point till the Iron island lies spread out before you [illegible] presenting the most [illegible] and pretty roadsteads I have seen on our coast, surpassing Monterey in every respect. The Heads is as beautiful a piece of land as there is on the coast, surrounded with the most picturesque scenery I have met with, giving one of the finest views. A little north of west lies the west reef of Cape Blanco, the broad channel between the cape and reef opening to its full breadth to the northwest, the lighthouse upon the cape seven miles distant. [illegible] On the east side of the harbor, distant four miles, is the beautiful sugar loaf Hunting mountain, rising nearly perpendicular from the bay 1,800 feet, with Bald Mountain overlooking it, 2,400 feet high. Immediately at the foot of the Heads on the north extreme, called Lovers' Leap, is found out a beautiful lake filled with about [illegible] having free [illegible] water through its whole extent, with hard, firm and bold banks, [illegible] feet above the water level of the lake and 30 above the ocean. The Heads are 250 feet high, perpendicular on east, south and west; they overlook Cape Blanco, together with the extensive plateau lying between them and Coquille river.

There is no [illegible] through the mountains directly east, therefore no east winds, the winds being from either the north, west or south. I should think for domestic trade no breakwater would be required, but if heavy ships, loading for foreign ports, some protection would be indispensable, owing to the length of time required to discharge ballast and to take in cargoes. It appears to me that a harbor of refuge is absolutely necessary for the safety of vessels and the growing commerce of the coast, destitute as it is of harbors, and Port Orford, from its geographical position and its great and easy accessibility, possesses [illegible] claims beyond any place I have seen on the coast.

A U. S. ELECTION

Nashville Cor. of the Cincinnati Commercial.

The roll was called for the first ballot of the day, or fifty-fourth ballot of the convention. The vote stood—Johnson 47, Henry 11, Stephens 23, Ewing 16, Key 4.

It was evident from this that the opposition had utterly failed to concentrate on either Brown or Bate, and were casting about wildly in all directions. They were scattering too much, and the hopes of the Johnson men rose fifty degrees with this ballot.

The immense jam of humanity in the lobby and galleries kept up such a continuous cheering for "Andy" that it was with difficulty the convention could proceed with business. Time and again the speaker requested silence, but the crowd was so overwhelmingly Johnson that they could not and would not "hold in" now that his election seemed certain.

Ninety eight members being present, it required fifty to elect. On the previous ballot, Johnson, therefore, lacked but three of an election. When the roll was called for the last ballot, Senator Hodges, heretofore a strong anti-Johnson man, "broke ranks" and came over gracefully in a neat little speech and cast his vote for Andrew Johnson.

Tremendous applause, cheering, whooping and yelling greeted this. The roll call continued as soon as partial quiet was restored. When Judge Lea's name was reached, he wheeled into line, forsook the now demoralized opposition and voted Johnson. The yells and cheers which greeted this are simply indescribable. No pen can do justice to the tumult and noise thereat. Further along Mr. Neal came over to Johnson. This caused a still bigger and louder whoop from the galleries. It was some time before the roll-call could proceed. When the final result was ascertained it was found that Johnson had received fifty two votes, and was, therefore, elected by two majority. Here followed a scene of wild confusion which cannot be put on paper. The great crowd in the galleries arose to their feet, swung their hats and yelled for Johnson until it seemed as though the roof of the capitol must come off to let out the noise.

The speaker tried to announce the vote as he is required to do, but his words could not be heard two feet from his nose. He rapped and pounded with his gavel, but the noise of that was drowned in the deafening yells. He then sat down and calmly waited for the crowd to exhaust itself. Meanwhile the members were waving hats and handkerchiefs, trying to quiet the excited throng, but without speedy success. Altogether it was a scene at once ludicrous and dramatic.

Finally the cheering ceased from sheer exhaustion, the vote was announced and Andrew Johnson declared to be elected to the United States Senate for the term of six years from the 4th of March next.

Now more yells, cheers and confusion, and a rush for the streets to carry the news to Johnson at the Maxwell House. About two thousand men undertook to bear the joyful intelligence. The first to get to Mr. Johnson's room (No. [illegible]) was a Mr. Taylor, of Clay county. When Taylor got to the door he was so exhausted he could not say a word, and another man with more enduring wind rushed in, gave A. J. the news, and with it an affectionate hug, bear fashion. Mr. Johnson could not speak for some seconds, but tears followed each other in quick succession down his pale and furrowed cheeks. He had won the great fight, one in which his heart was more deeply engaged than any other of his life.

In a minute his room was full of overjoyed friends. When his room would hold no more, the stream overflowed into the corridors, passages, stairways, rotunda and out into the streets. The scene in his room was affecting. Many of the old white-haired Democrats cried as they clasped him whom they call the "Great Commoner" by the hand. Many were so choked with emotion that they could not say a word. They could only shake hands and then sit down in a corner and wipe away the tears with their coat-tails.

An Irishman wedged his way in, grasped A. J. by the hand, and saluted "the next President."

Uncle Polk, an aged colored man, the trusted body servant of [illegible] Polk, came in, saying that he had not felt so happy since 1844, when master beat Clay.

Meanwhile there was an immense crowd outside calling for "Andy." He was brought forward, bowed his acknowledgements, but said not a word. His face beamed as it never did before in all these hard fought [illegible] battles. He was the happiest man in the State.

ALBANI'S JEWELS

[From the Chicago Inter-Ocean.]

"See, here are some of my jewels." The lid of a casket was thrown back, and there, piled in a confused mass, a myriad of [illegible] stars, scintillating galaxies and glittering constellations met the eye at every glance. It was [illegible] light seeking its [illegible] miniature Golconda, the product of a gold mine, and all [illegible] at small [illegible]. Diamonds, emeralds, rubies and pearls glowed and twinkled. What a sight for a woman!

"This I adore greatly. It was given me at my appearance at the marriage of the Duke of Edinburgh and the Grand Duchess Marie. The Emperor of Russia presented it." She lifted as she spoke a [illegible] star set with great brilliants, hanging attached to a double necklace of pearls and gold. It was a fortune in itself.

"This was presented by the subscribers at the end of my Moscow season. Is it not beautiful?" and she lifted a jeweled butterfly that rested upon the top of the collection as though sipping diamond delight. It quivered and sparkled at every motion. The body was composed of an immense emerald, and the wings of diamonds bordered with rubies and emeralds and sapphires. It was larger than any living insect of the species.

"This was given to me by Queen Victoria," and she lifted a necklace of pearls with large diamond and pearl cross attached. "The Queen never goes to opera since Prince Albert's death, and those artists whom she desires to hear go to Windsor and sing in private before her. She treated me with much consideration, like a mother in fact, and was pleased most when I sang the old Scotch ballads, 'Robin Adair' and 'Blue Bells of Scotland.' This you may have heard of before," she proceeded, mentioning it, and she lifted a diadem of brilliants studded with diamond bouquets. "An Indian Prince threw it and it struck me on the forehead. They thought I was critically injured, because I staggered and came near falling. My forehead was badly bruised, and the Prince was grieved lest he had done me harm. I was bowing as he threw his gift, and so it struck me. It was in London, last season, at my benefit."

Then came a feather about six inches long of fretted silver, set with diamonds. No ostrich ever wore such a plume. Another gift of the Prince was a parure of diamonds, pearls and turquoises. The Earl of Dudley was represented by a massive gold bracelet with the word "Amitie" set in diamond letters, each of which was an inch long. But why enumerate more? There were handfuls, yea, quarts of precious gems, tiaras, bracelets, finger-rings, ear-rings, jeweled flowers, still untouched. It is useless to attempt an estimate of the value of these costly evidences of the appreciation of her admirers. If the reader can judge of the worth of diamonds in heaps, he may be qualified to compute the value of these, but not otherwise. There were single stones that would bring $10,000, perhaps $20,000 in any market.

"I like diamonds," she said, and who could blame her?

It would be superfluous to refer to her wardrobe, filling ten immense trunks. The contents are her own private property. She stated that the dresses worn on the stage were furnished by the managers of the troupes, each artist being allowed to decide as to the style of the garment required for each character, and it was made accordingly. If her fancy suited she drew upon her own store of finery, but this was always gratuitous.

After all this trouble and impertinence, this trespassing upon her good nature, it might be supposed that she was vexed and anxious to be rid of the interviewer, but if she was it was not apparent when she said at his departure: "If you desire any further information I should be pleased to give it to you."

THE FORTY-FOURTH.

The Forty fourth Congress, which commences March 4, 1875, and ends March 3, 1877, will be widely different in its political complexion from the one now in session. The Senate (seventy four in number) will be composed of forty three Republicans, twenty nine Democrats and two Independents, giving the Republicans a majority of twelve. The House (numbering 292 Representatives) will consist, so far as at present known, of 165 Democrats, 103 Republicans and 6 Independents. California will choose four Representatives in September next, Connecticut a like number in April next, Mississippi six in November, and New Hampshire three in March, making seventeen in all, and there is one vacancy by death. The number of Territorial Delegates is nine—four Democrats, four Republicans and one to be elected from New Mexico in 1875. Of the members of the House there are some twenty four whose seats will be contested. Fifteen of these were returned as elected on the Republican ticket and nine on the Democratic ticket. Thus it will be seen that in any event the Democrats will have the control of the House of Representatives. Hence it is to be presumed that when the next Congress shall enter upon its duties the Democrats will feel responsible in the main for the subsequent legislation. It is true they will not have full possession of the Government, but they have such a measure of control as will suffice to put them upon their responsibility and impose upon them the necessity of doing something more than captious fault finding or criticising the acts and policy of their opponents. They will have to take the initiative and have a policy of their own, which will afford the enemy an opportunity to play, in turn, the censor and the critic.—S. F. Chronicle.

OREGON

The Upper Wallamet is at a good boating stage.

Salem Grange has forwarded $87 currency to the sufferers from the grasshopper plague in Nebraska.

Mr J L Parrish of Salem puts his loss at several thousand dollars from the effect of the cold weather on his nursery—4,000 Monterey cypresses alone are apparently dead.

West Union, Washington county, has a literary society which meets once a week, and a society paper is published every fortnight. The people of the neighborhood attend the meetings very regularly and find much in them to interest, instruct and please.

McMinnville has a stock board where the boys and young men buy and sell with all the regularity of the genuine business. They get no divs, but in compensation they are not called on for assessments. They have a good deal of sport and some money is made and lost.

Wm Simpson, who escaped from the penitentiary last week, played himself off on a farmer near Salem as a belated traveler who had been beaten and stripped of his raiment. He succeeded in getting the clothes and food and went on his way rejoicing without his striped shirt.

Rev. James Campbell, of Harrisburg, Oregon, is employed as assistant pastor for the year to come of the Christian Church in Salem, as the pastor, Rev Dr L L Rowland, will have to be absent much of the time in discharge of his official duties as State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Seventy barrels of flour donated at Salem for the Kansas grasshopper sufferers remain undisposed of, and as the word from Kansas is to "keep your flour and send us money," the relief committee will proceed to pay the donations back pro rata to the donors. The Record says the Kansas relief men are altogether too hungry for "money."

Mr B. B. Branson writes the Farmer as follows under date of Feb 8th: Mill Creek Grange, Yamhill county, is in a flourishing condition. Considerable money in treasury, and we expect to build a hall next summer. Our next meeting will be on the 20th of February, at which time we will initiate Jacob Doran, an immigrant of 1843, aged 65. The fall wheat is supposed to be all killed in this vicinity. Stock is doing well, as farmers are generally provided with plenty of feed.

Mr Holcomb of West Union, Washington county, writing to the Farmer under date of February 12th, says: "There has been considerable excitement in our neighborhood about wheat being frozen out. We are now satisfied that the only damage that has been done has been in the last week. We have examined closely and find that but little of it is dead in these parts. We hear of other places where it is frozen out, but we hope they will be as happily disappointed as we were."

Petroleum as Fuel.—Experiments with petroleum as fuel for locomotives have lately been made in Canada, the result being that with an average consumption of four gallons per mile the engine steamed quite freely and made good time with a train of thirty cars—being about a barrel for every ten miles. It is stated that the most simple contrivance for burning petroleum is either by means of a jet of steam or compressed air, passed at right angles over the orifice of a pipe in such a manner that the oil will be sucked and thrown into the furnace in the form of a fine spray, where, if properly adjusted, it will undergo perfect combustion. The cost of the apparatus is but trifling.

THE TEMPERANCE ALLIANCE

FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE OREGON STATE TEMPERANCE ALLIANCE CONVENTION

Salem, Feb. 17, 1875.

The Annual Convention of the State Temperance Alliance has hitherto called together a large gathering of the friends of the temperance cause by delegates from the various religious and benevolent associations of the State. This convention was no exception to the rule. A slight hoar frost took place during the night, but the morning, like the previous six days, opened bright and charming. The atmosphere was everything that could be desired to make traveling pleasant and attractive. The capital city of the State could once more boast of a convention composed of a favorable representation of Oregon's intelligent sons, fair daughters and worthy matrons.

At 10:30 A. M. the delegates began to assemble in Reed's Opera House.

At 11 o'clock the President, Professor L. J. Powell, of the Wallamet University, called the convention to order. The Rev. P. M. Starr opened the convention with a short appropriate prayer. The Secretary read a list of the officers for the past year.

On motion of Mr. W. R. Dunbar a committee of three was appointed on credentials. The President appointed Rev. George W. Dimick, Mr. A. G. Walling and Rev. C. W. Shaw.

On motion of Rev. George W. Dimick, a committee on order of business was ordered. The President appointed Rev. J. L. Parrish, Mrs. C. Foltz and Mr. W. R. Dunbar.

On motion the convention adjourned to 1 o'clock to give the committees on credentials and order of business time to report.

THE OVERWORKED MAN.

The following graphic and truthful picture of the business man who is overtasking his powers is from the London Sanitary Record:

Sooner or later he finds that his day's work has become an effort, a toil rather than a delight; the last hour has become a strain, only maintained by determination; a sense of exhaustion and fatigue develops its closure of the day's work, and the last columns of figures have presented difficulties hitherto unknown, and the last pile of letters has seemed more trying than of yore. Anything new of an unwonted character making special demands on the higher faculties becomes arduous and distasteful, revealing the fact that the higher powers are first commencing to give way to announce their inability, while the more routine matters, which have almost become automatic or even habitual, can still be effectively discharged.

But in time even these lower processes are affected, and the last half hour at the office is a distinct trial, and is followed by a new sense of exhaustion. There is a certain amount of irritability combined with the sense of exhaustion—that irritability which is very often found along with the exhaustion of nerve matter. This irritation, sometimes almost amounting to exultation, marks the commencement of nervous exhaustion and failure. While work seems to become more irksome, the usual sources of pleasure no longer afford their wonted solace and satisfaction. There is a heightened susceptibility to any little trivial annoyance; domestic matters are felt more keenly; the dinner is not so satisfactory, the children are noisy; the more necessity for rest and the more distinct the craving for comfort and quiet, the less seems forthcoming. There is an emotional exaltation which reveals the irritability of the exhausted nerve centers; the newspaper is stupid and uninteresting, the piano wants tuning, servants are deteriorating, children are less obedient, and wives less sympathizing than of yore. The mind is as sensitive as the skin after a blister; the slightest touch produces pain.

From the Record: Cottage Grove Grange No 75 P of H. met in the hall of the Good Templars on the 6th inst., when the following officers were installed for the ensuing year: A H Spore, M.; N Martin, O.; S R Dillard, L.; A Taylor, L.; R M Shields, S.; O P Adams, A S.; J H Shortridge, S.; Miss Pamelia Perkins, L A S. Mrs Belinda Masterson, P.; Mrs Ellen Hazleton, C. Flora and the Gate Keeper, from inability, were not in attendance. After the installation of officers the sisters of the grange brought forth a bountiful supply of yellow legged chickens, cakes, pies, etc., and had a good time generally.

WHY COMPROMISE?

Whether it is better to compromise a lawsuit, taking less than one is entitled to receive, than to fight it out to the bitter end may depend upon various considerations. Assuming that there are no peculiar moral aspects in a given case, we should say that unless the ultimate legal rights were in doubt, or the delay and expense of reaching them would be very considerable, the true policy would be to insist upon a complete surrender or a complete legal remedy. Upon what grounds President Dillon, of the Union Pacific railway company, or the company he represents, can prefer a claim for any especial favor or leniency at the hands of the Government, it is not easy to perceive. The history of the construction of the road from its incipiency to its completion, is the history of a system of credit mobilier, by which the munificence of the Government was made to filter through the railway enterprise into the coffers of the men engaged in it. The actual cost of the road was paid and more than paid by the Government, and the owners have the road for nothing. They have not even given their time to it, for every day that has been devoted to it by them has been charged up as a part of the cost, at high rates, and paid for out of the Government subsidy.

But the subsidy was a loan, not a gift. Very well, if it was a loan it should be repaid as a loan, according to the terms of the contract, unless the company is unable to meet it. There is no place for "compromise" in a plain case of debt on a written instrument.

As to the ability of the company to pay, the annual report of its officers ought to be pretty good evidence. Their report last summer showed large net earnings, even after allowing the stock subscriptions to be capitalized, whereas in fact they represented not a dollar invested. The claim of the Government is for interest accrued on its loan to the road. The amount already overdue, after deducting the amount due the company from the Government, for transportation, is about $1,300,000. The amount annually accruing is not far from $400,000, less the amount of transportation required of the road by the Government, which is very considerable, but can not be accurately stated in advance. The revenues of the company, unless its own reports are unreliable, are amply sufficient to meet this annual interest account. All that is necessary to enable the company to pay the interest as it falls due, is to apply its revenue, in excess of necessary expenses, to the demand in question, instead of capitalizing subscriptions upon which nothing has ever been paid by the holders of certificates.

This is the state of the case which President Dillon proposes to compromise with the Government. To one who is not initiated in the mysteries of railway financiering, it looks very much the same as it would look for the maker of a promissory note, while abundantly solvent, to refuse to pay his note, in order to open the way for litigation, and then, when legal proceedings were talked of, rush forward with a proposition to "compromise." We can recollect nothing like it in the history of public affairs, except the "equitable adjustment" plank of the Oregon Democratic platform of 1870. The right of the Government to recover the $1,300,000 is reported by the Attorney-General (who is a good lawyer, notwithstanding the N. Y. Times and Springfield Republican to the contrary), to be clear and indisputable; there is no apparent reason why there should be much delay or expense in reaching a decision of the case; and surely no one will say there are moral considerations to influence the course of the Government favorably to the railway company.

The proposition of the company is, in brief, to pay into the treasury annually for twenty years $500,000, and thereafter $750,000 annually, which shall be placed to the credit of the company and shall bear interest at 6 per cent. per annum, which also shall be placed to the credit of the company at the end of every half year; the interest on the loan to the company, in the meantime, to remain unpaid, and draw no interest. Then when the amount of the company's account against the Government, with interest accrued thereon, at this practically compound ratio, shall be equal to the Government mortgage with simple interest, it shall be covered into the Treasury and the mortgage shall be cancelled. This may be appropriately denominated a method for the payment of the principal of one's debts by refusing to pay the interest. If this wonderful mode of financiering had only been discovered a few years sooner, how many of us, instead of going for years with our faces to the grindstone, would now be living in ease if not in elegance!

There is, nevertheless, something in the idea that the company, having the management of the road in their own hands, can give the Government great trouble in the future. This appears to influence the Secretary of the Treasury more or less, in considering the company's proposition. Viewed from this standpoint, the hand is in the lion's mouth, and the question of getting it out is the question presented to the Secretary. But the fairness of the proposition is not affected by this consideration, except that it is thus made to appear more unfair and unreasonable.

SHOVEL AND TONGS.

The Baltimore and Ohio railway has always been a sort of off ox in the freight combinations. The other railways could combine, but the B. & O. has paddled its own canoe—if a railway can be supposed to have a canoe. It was one of the earliest railways in the country, and, having been constructed before the days of bogus stock, its stock subscriptions represented hard money. Of course its construction account did not mount up into the millions as do the construction accounts of roads built under the "lamp-black and-paper" system, albeit the latter cost less in reality than the former. And, as unlike the rest in its management as in its capital stock, the B. & O. has always been reputed as doing business on legitimate principles. Such an institution could not live peaceably in this age. It ought to have known better than to try. Between it and the Pennsylvania railway company there has always been either a state of active war or armed truce, and war more than truce. But the conflict has not, as we recollect, been so sharp at any time heretofore, as at present. It is a battle of giants, and will hardly end till one or both have seen the necessity of choosing peace as the alternative of complete exhaustion. Meanwhile the people who have freight to be carried, and the people who travel, will get the benefit of the sharp competition. It is an ill wind that blows no one any good.

DEATH OF E. W. HODGKINSON.

From Mr. J. W. Hodgkinson, we learn that his brother E. W. Hodgkinson, who formerly resided in this city, and was one or two terms District Attorney for this district, died recently at the home of his parents at St. James, Suffolk county New York. For some time, Mr. Hodgkinson had been practising his profession in Kansas, until, falling a victim to pulmonary consumption, he started on the 8th of last month, to go and lay himself down in the land of his childhood. He barely reached home before the end came.

Hodgkinson was a talented young man and a genial companion. Not a few in Portland remember him with feelings of more than mere kindness, and will read the announcement of his death with genuine sorrow.

From other sources we learn that the report mentioned by our Oregon City correspondent, of the purpose of superseding Hon. Henry Warren, Receiver of the Land Office, with T. R. Harrison, of Yamhill, is not without foundation. Just think of dismissing such a man as Henry Warren and filling his place with T. R. Harrison!

There is a rumor afloat that an order has been issued from Washington, directing the military authorities of this Department to see that the OREGONIAN hands over its dispatches to the Bulletin every day, at least three hours before the time of going to press. We do not credit it.

The United States grand jury will meet in March, when this community will have a chance to see whether a member of the ring can, by simply resigning the office he has held, avoid a prosecution for embezzlement.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

HARBOR AND RIVER APPROPRIATIONS—WISCONSIN HAS A MAN WHO LOOKS AFTER HER INTERESTS—THE FILIBUSTERING DEMOCRACY—PERSONAL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3, 1875.

To the Editor of the OREGONIAN:

Two-thirds of the second section of the 43d Congress has expired, with apparently but little progress made. Yet something has been done. The appropriation bills have all been considered in their respective committees and several have passed the House. There is no danger that any of them will fail for want of action. The river and harbor bill is the one in which your people are most interested. It is before the House committee on commerce, and will not be reported until the return of Mr. Wheeler, of New York, who is now at New Orleans investigating. The amounts for your Wallamet and Columbia (Upper and Lower) rivers have been agreed upon and will be passed substantially as reported. The total amounts for those two rivers embracing more than 400 miles in length, is the munificent sum of $55,000 in currency. To show how Portland is treated with her large foreign and domestic commerce, I will merely mention that the amount to be reported "for the improvement of the Wallamet and Columbia rivers from Portland to the sea" is $20,000; for the improvement of Superior Bay, Wisconsin, with not half the commerce, $110,000. The reason is not very obscure. The acting chairman in Mr. Wheeler's absence is Philetus Sawyer, of Wisconsin, and he is looking after the interests of his constituents with a vigilant eye. In addition, he has got for other places in Wisconsin the following appropriations, viz: Fox and Wisconsin rivers, $750,000; Green Bay, $25,000; Menomonee, $25,000; Sturgeon Bay, $10,000; Ahnapee, $25,000; Two Rivers, $25,000; Manitowac, $25,000; Sheboygan, $12,000; Port Washington, $25,000; Milwaukee, $50,000; Racine, $10,000; and Kenosha, $30,000. A total of $1,152,000. Mr. Sawyer has been here a number of years, is a man of ability, and looks carefully after the wants of his constituents. And this leads me to say that Oregon appears to be very blind to her own interests. If Col. Nesmith had been returned, with his great natural abilities and his long experience in Congress, he would undoubtedly have been chairman of some important committee when his political friends come into power, and he could have been of more use to the people of Oregon and Washington Territory than half a dozen green men.

THE CONTEST IN THE HOUSE.

A strange scene was enacted in the House last week, which, if a traveler had reported it to have taken place among the Maoris of New Zealand, or in an assemblage of Chinese notables, we would have considered proof positive that those miserable pagans were demented and utterly unfit for self government. The majority of the House (the Republicans) determined to pass the civil rights bill, which the minority (the Democrats) were resolved should not occur; so, whenever any attempt was made to bring the matter up, Mr. Randall, of Penn., (Dem.) seconded by Mr. Cox, of New York, (Dem.) would move that the House do now adjourn, supplemented by a motion that when it does adjourn it adjourns to Saturday; and with a slight variation of alternating Friday for Saturday, this delightful farce was kept up forty-six hours, during which the roll was called seventy-six times. There was a continuous session for nearly two days and nights, and during that time nothing was done but read a list of names, to prevent the majority—really two-thirds—of the House from doing an act which they alone were responsible for to the country. It appears a motion to adjourn is always in order—no matter how often made—if any subsequent business has been transacted by the House, and some legislative sharp discovered years ago that a motion to "adjourn till Saturday when they adjourn" is subsequent business. This is called parliamentary law! The Opposition performed their part a little too well, for it showed the Republicans that it was in the power of the minority, if they only numbered a fifth, by dilatory motions to defeat any bill they chose. Hence yesterday the House resolved, by two-thirds—181 to 90—that they would so change the rules that no dilatory motion to adjourn would be considered more than once.

LIBERUM VETO.

In the Polish Diet, before the partition of those crooked Poles among the great States of Europe, it was in the power of any member to stop all further proceedings on any bill, or on the election of a King, by raising his finger and crying out, as Sam Randall did for the yeas and nays—"Nie pozwalam—I do not permit." Of course everything fell into chaos, and Poland went to the devil—or which is the same thing—to the Russians, Austrians and Prussians; and Carlyle declares that this liberum veto was the main cause, and that any people who would tolerate such a libel on common sense ought to be, as they were, wiped out of the map of Europe.

R. R. ENDORSEMENTS BY GOVERNMENT.

I am of the opinion that no government aid will be given this session of congress. The principal bills are for the aid of the Texas Pacific and Northern Pacific roads. I think both these bills would pass the Senate if reported from the committee, but there is danger that they would fail in the House. However, the friends of these measures have not given up all hope yet, but it is a forlorn hope.

PERSONAL.

There is the usual crowd of gentlemen from the Webfoot country here. Among others whom I have met were Ben Holladay, Col. Chapman, Capt. Crandall, Gen. Ben Simpson, B. J. Pengra, H. L. Chapman and David P. Thompson. The latter is almost a permanent institution here.

Col Chapman is working with all his might, but I grieve to say, his success is scarcely within the limits of probability.

Ben Holladay is here looking after his mail contracts, and trying to get the time of his West Side R. R. land grant extended. It also has a gloomy outlook. I never saw Mr. Holladay appear in better health; and when I saw him at Postmaster-Gen. Jewell's reception the other evening, with his fair young bride clinging so tenderly to his arm, he looked so youthful and happy that no one would have dreamed he had reached the shady side of fifty.

H. L. Chapman, civil engineer, is trying to get the jetty system, now in use at the mouth of the Danube, extended to the mouth of the Wallamet. He asks an appropriation of $85,000. Prospects poor.

J. H. Montgomery and wife are stopping at "The Arlington." He looks as though he would not object to a government guarantee of bonds for the Northern Pacific, but he does not appear very hopeful.

SEMI-OCCASIONAL.

FROM OREGON CITY.

Our regular correspondent, writing from the above place under date of the 17th, says:

It has been reported on the streets for several days that Henry Warren is to be shortly removed from the office of Receiver at the land office in this district, and that T. R. Harrison, of Yamhill, is to take his place. We have this on good authority. Senator Mitchell has telegraphed to a party in this place, that he felt himself under obligation to propose the name of Mr. Harrison for the office which Mr. Warren holds. We do not, of course, understand the nature of the obligation under which Mr. Mitchell is placed, but we do know that Mr. Warren has made a prompt, faithful and competent officer and we shall be sorry to see him removed. We do not know how Mr. Harrison will succeed, but it would be hard to find a better officer than Warren. "Civil service reform" has been forgotten in this instance, as in most of the others of Mitchell's selection and Grant's appointment in this State.

THURSDAY MORNING, FEB. 18, 1875.

CITY.

MAYHEM.—About 12 o'clock on Tuesday night a boy named Miller came to the police headquarters, and stated that he wished to swear out a warrant for the arrest of two men, whose names he gave, for the crime of mayhem committed on him. When Miller reached the jail his appearance indicated great personal violence. There were several severe bruises about his head and face, and a portion of his left ear was almost bitten off. The injured organ was still bleeding, while the bitten portion was only held by two small threads of cartilege. The boy stated that while on his father's farm, situated about 12 miles from the city, he was attacked by two men (names are suppressed for certain reasons) on Tuesday afternoon. One of the men knocked him down, struck him several times afterward, and then nearly bit off his left ear. Miller got up at length when he was brutally assaulted by the other man, who dealt him several blows. Finding his life in danger he took to his heels and made his escape. Soon after the brutal assault young Miller started on foot for Portland, reaching here about midnight. For a long time a feud has existed between the Millers and the family to which the two men are connected; and it would seem that the unprovoked attack made on the defenseless lad can be accounted for in no other manner but the bad blood between the respective families. A warrant has been issued and placed in the hands of an officer, and the guilty parties will be arrested to-day. If reports are true they should suffer the full extent of the law for their brutality.

ACQUITTED—FOUND GUILTY.—On Tuesday evening, about 11 o'clock, after having been out several hours, the jury in the case of State vs John DeBoest and Mrs. Annie Stromeyer, indicted for rape, returned a verdict of not guilty. The defendants were released from custody at once. Yesterday the case of John Dougherty, indicted for grand larceny, came on for trial. After a short deliberation the jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged. As yet the court has not fixed a time for passing sentence on the prisoner. On being arraigned in court yesterday morning, Thomas Green, a colored man, indicted for larceny from a dwelling, withdrew his previously entered plea of not guilty, and submitted a plea of guilty. Friday morning was fixed as the time for pronouncing sentence against the prisoner.

PASSENGERS.—The steamer Ajax will sail this forenoon for San Francisco. She carries away the following passengers: Thos. Davenport, Al. Zieber, M. W. Henderson, Jos Kohn, M. Seller, W. J. VanSchuyver, Jno. Hartland, Mrs. V. B. Mitchell, Miss E. Megler, Mrs. M. T. Wilson, J. Harris, H. G. Pease, Mrs. F. M. Cole, Mrs. J. Yates, Thos. B. Morris, J. M. Whitworth, Chas. L. Dell, Marshall Blinn, T. Dittenhoffer, Mrs. F. P. Church, B. H. Brooks, A. J. Bonner, E. Guinn, H. A. Griffin, A. E. Goodnough, C. F. Smart, Henry Bozal and 2 children, Mrs. J. R. Bellinger and child, G. W. Leo and child, Miss Mary DuBois, Frank Phillipi, G. W. Lucas, J. Crellin, Robert McKay, Miss Mary Stanton, Mrs. H. N. Markly, Dr. A. M. Belt, Wells, Fargo & Co.'s messenger and 20 in the steerage.

AN EVENING WITH SIR WALTER SCOTT.—The fraternity informally organized a short time since in the Unitarian Church, will furnish a literary treat this evening to their friends, at the chapel, corner of Yamhill and Seventh. A short sketch of Scott's life will be followed by illustrative readings and recitations, in which several well-known amateurs have consented to take part. The entertainment begins at half past 7, and the public is invited. No admission fee.

ENTERTAINMENT.—We learn that Multnomah Lodge No. 12, I. O. G. T., intend giving an entertainment, for the benefit of the lodge, the latter part of next week. They have selected the drama of "The Drunkard," and the characters are sustained by members of the Order, except Mr. C. A. Ball and E. R. Bow, who have volunteered for the occasion. They are rehearsing under competent instruction, and intend to present it in first-class style.

THEIR SUSPENDED.—A wood-sawing machine, set up in the lower end of First street yesterday, made it necessary for the street cars to stop at the next turn-table above, and passengers had to foot it for three or four blocks. The passengers were not particularly well pleased with the arrangement, nor did it tickle the superintendent of the street railway much. Why was it?

WEATHER REPORT.—From the records of the U. S. Signal Station of Observation, Portland, Oregon, February 17, 1875:

	7 A. M.	2 P. M.	9 P. M.
Thermometer	32°	49°	38°
Wind, direction	N.	Calm.	Calm.

MASQUERADES.—A children's masquerade will take place at the rink on the 27th inst., and on March 13th a grand masquerade will be the event at the same place. Prices have been reduced and ladies are admitted free.

DALLES MAIL.—The Dalles mail arrived here overland last evening about 9 o'clock. This afternoon at four o'clock the mail will start back, closing at 3:30.

THE STAGE.

Madame Phelps and troupe are still at Victoria.

Omar Kingsley and the DuCrow brothers are performing in San Francisco for John Wilson's circus.

We observe by exchanges that the celebrated (?) McGinley Variety Troupe ("every artiste a star"), will soon appear in San Francisco.

Mr. J. H. Leroy, who has been connected with the Phelps dramatic troupe, returned from Victoria last evening, his engagement with Mrs. Phelps having terminated. To-day he will embark on the Ajax for San Francisco.

An exchange says that Sam W. Piercy, some time leading man of the Academy, Chicago, is doing nothing in consequence of some little difficulty of arriving at the opinion as to which was the leading part after Virginius, that of Icilius or Appius Claudius.

The Figaro of the 6th says: "Yesterday afternoon the complete paraphernalia of Chiarini's circus was sold at auction in the Dashaway Hall, Manager Wilson being the chief purchaser. The entire stud of horses and mules is also to be sold, it being Signor Chiarini's intention to retire from the business. During the many years in which Guiseppe Chiarini has been a successful circus manager, he has traveled through and exhibited in every part of the known world, from the Cape of Good Hope to Japan."

THE FAIR.

At the lunch yesterday the rush was so great that many were obliged to wait, and all who partook were supplied with a substantial, well-cooked meal. The attendance at night was even larger than on previous evenings, and the receipts indicated an increase. During the day and evening a number of articles were raffled off, a list of which will be given with those to be mentioned to-morrow. From 11 to 2 the usual lunch will be served, and during this period several articles will be raffled. In the evening the fair will continue as heretofore, and towards the close raffles will take place, and dancing will form a feature. The hall will be closed on Friday evening and the fair will resume on Saturday evening. The managers have been untiring in their efforts, and a financial success is certain to be their reward. The receipts, so far, exceed the expectations. Big lunch to-day from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

"ARCADIA" AND WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

PORTLAND, Feb. 17, 1875.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

It seems strange to hear women of self-reliance and ability abuse themselves and their sex. "Arcadia," in your issue of Tuesday, says this:

"A bad woman is so infinitely worse than a bad man, that there is no comparison."

This sentence indicates that "Arcadia" thinks that women have so much more ability than man, that they are able to do much more harm. I should think that she meant that the Creator had given them a more depraved heart, had she not said in the same article: "Human nature is human nature the world over." Now she evidently thinks that woman is not a human and only subject to a spiritual existence by virtue of their husbands—as the book of Mormon teaches, or that they are the only humanity. It cannot be possible that she would teach that the Creator made two human natures—one for Adam's heart and the other for his rib. I confess to being puzzled. But this proposition surprises me more than the other:

"When a woman has once crossed that immeasurably deep gulf which custom has placed between virtuous and fallen women, there is no return, while for man there is always hope and chance of retrieve."

Is it possible? No return for a woman to a virtuous life? If a woman commits the same sin her brother has oft committed, there is no salvation for her, but for him, plenty of it. Wonder what class of animal creation we belong to! But seriously, I am afraid "Arcadia" has got things badly mixed. She has confounded "custom" with "principle."

Custom, with a people that degrades woman to a doll, a nonentity, a useful piece of furniture, subject to the caprice and whims of our nobler lord, has debarred woman—once sinned—from being received into society with the man who has fallen a score of times. To right this custom and save the fallen is the true principle of the pure woman suffragist. While one is compelled to look up to the other the weaker will always be imposed upon. Jesus gave the right law to the Scribes and Pharisees when he told the one without sin to cast the first stone.

Much that Arcadia has said is true and good. But the arguments presented on so rotten a foundation as the above quotations show, fail to convince the reader that she is not prejudiced. She, like many other anti-woman suffragists, seems to think that women want the ballot so they can step into office. No good woman has such a thought in view. A higher principle, a nobler thought, inspires the human heart. I think that while the same curse is before the man and woman for the same offense, the man will be less liable to drag a fellow-creature so low. When virtuous and salutary laws can be made by the vote of pure woman—the fallen number only one in four hundred—the fallen man will do good, though it be through selfishness.

How one in favor of saving the fallen, reclaiming the drunkard and hastening the reign of righteousness can oppose the right of suffrage, because a few dozen bad women will have the opportunity of showing their badness, I cannot understand. How long would it take the 50,000 women of our State to send to oblivion the 100 bad ones, think you?

I thought, when I read "Arcadia's" article in your excellent paper, her brain was a little muddled on this one point of fallen woman, and if she could have it straightened a little she would be a fervent woman suffragist, and for her good only have I written this article.

LAURA K.

Mr. Leo Fox, who was for a long time a successful merchant in Albany, where his brothers still reside, has recently returned from a visit to Europe, and a private letter says he has purchased an interest in woolen mills at Laporte, Indiana, where he will reside and conduct business for the future.

The rivers are again open and business is looking up. Alive to the necessities of the times, BECK & WALDMAN have made a liberal reduction in the price of dress suits, clothing, in fact to suit all tastes. They can provide the youth of this broad land with neat fitting suits which will certainly please the mammas and papas. The stock is large and no one need go about seeking goods if they only make a careful inspection of their display. Morning, noon or night, they are prepared to do justice to their patrons. The old place, Washington and Front streets.

In order to fill up his stock, Mr. JOSEPH KOHN, will leave shortly for San Francisco for the purpose of making a personal selection of Spring Goods. Mr. K. has had many years experience and knows exactly the wants of the trade. In this connection it is well to say that the stock of clothing, furnishing goods, etc., at present in store, is fully as large as can be seen at any establishment of the kind on the Northern coast. He can accommodate you now both as to quality of goods and prices. Call to-day at his place, opposite National Bank.

Mineral Remedies Superseded.

All except those who refuse to be convinced by the most positive proof, admit the infinite superiority of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to the mineral remedies which it has to a very great extent superseded, and which, it is to be hoped, for the sake of the human stomach may eventually be abandoned altogether. The Bitters are a most potent corrective of disorders of the liver, stomach and kidneys. Habitual constipation, dyspepsia, bowel complaints, and the numerous and changeful symptoms which indicate internal weakness or disease, are in every instance not only relieved, but cured, by a persistent and systematic use of this sovereign remedy. Intermittent and bilious-remittent fevers may be surely prevented by a daily use of this powerful, but pleasant, and mild tonic. Physical vigor is the best armor in which to encounter disease. Secure it by recourse to the Bitters.

A SINGULAR TRIAL.

A MAN ACTUALLY CONVICTED OF WHISTLING IN THE STREETS.

[From the Pall Mall Gazette.]

A millworker has been convicted of whistling at the Provost of Musselburg. The name of the miscreant is McWatt, and full details of the lamentable affair were given by the Provost at the Musselburg Police Court last week, when McWatt was charged before the Bailies on the bench with the offense he had committed. It seems that on the evening of the 8th inst., the Provost was passing along the street near station bridge at Musselburgh, when he met McWatt with another young man. McWatt and his companion both commenced a loud whistling. The young man who joined in the outrage appears to have fled conscience-stricken immediately after committing it, but McWatt was left in the hands of an inspector of police, who happily was on the spot, and the Provost, with all the dignity of deportment to be expected in a local authority, went down street again. Will it be believed that later in the day McWatt, on meeting the Provost, repeated the offense? On this second occasion the Provost met McWatt face to face on the outskirts of a crowd returning from some races. McWatt was whistling at the pitch of his voice, "as if," added the Provost, "to make me knock him down!"

The Provost did not make this complaint as "Provost of the burgh." He spoke, as he explained, "as a private citizen," maintaining "that this youth, who does not pay taxes, had no right to insult a private citizen," and be guilty of behavior likely to lead to "breach of the peace," or, in other words, calculated to provoke the Provost to pitch into him. McWatt's defense was singularly weak. "It is," he said, "very seldom that I walk the streets without whistling;" and on being reminded by Bailie Adamson that he had been requested once or twice by the police and the Provost to "stop it," he replied, "If thochts like that come into the Provost's head, it's not my fault;" meaning no doubt, that he had not actually intended to whistle at the Provost. The punishment inflicted on this miserable youth may strike some persons as being almost too severe, but it must be remembered that to tempt a Provost to commit an aggravated assault is not only a thoughtless but diabolical act. McWatt was cautioned "not to do it again," and thus ended one of the most remarkable trials of modern days.

A chunk of a boy was seen studying the weather report charts hanging in the post office the other day, and wondering at the lad's interest a gentleman approached him and asked: "Well, my son, what do you wish to find?" "I'm looking to see how the old thermometer stands at Duluth," replied the boy; "if she's ten below I've got to dust for home and split more wood; if she's at zero I can go off with Bill Jackson to see his dog fight a tame coon."—Detroit Free Press.

Must on [illegible]
A frosty couch [illegible]

But while he spoke a thrill of [illegible]

And when I opened them again
I started [illegible]

[illegible] and in the [illegible]
A flush all glowing [illegible]
[illegible]
That promise of a glorious day

The waters in their glassy sleep
Shone with the hues that tinged the sky
And rugged cliff and barren steep
Gleamed with a brightness from on high

And one was there whose journey lay
Into the slowly gathering night
With steady step he held his way
O'er shadowy vale and gleaming height

I marked his firm though weary tread
The lifted eye and brow serene
And saw no shade of doubt or dread
Pass o'er that traveler's placid mien

And others came their journey o'er
And bade good night with words of cheer
To-morrow we shall meet once more
'Tis but the night that parts us here

And I, he said shall sleep ere long—
These fading gleams will soon be gone—
Shall sleep to rise refreshed and strong
In the bright day that yet will dawn

I heard I watched him as he went
A lessening form until the light
Of evening from the firmament
Had passed and he was lost to sight

SIMPLE ALICE

The Chicago Tribune tells the following The clerk of a prominent South Side jeweller wears arnica under his left eye There is a handsome gold locket for sale at Lapman's below cost the fashionable wedding which was to have taken place between a young lady on Ashland avenue and a young man on Peoria street is off and the jeweller's clerk has taken out a warrant against the young man on Peoria street, for assault and battery This is how it happened

The young man on Peoria street had arranged to give the young woman on Ashland avenue a gold locket for a New Year's gift On consultation, his betrothed declined to have anything inscribed on the token but her Christian name "You see" she said, "I expect to change my other name, duckey, before next year, and if anything were to happen like a death or a divorce it would still suit me, you see Just put simple 'Alice' on it, pretty" The young man from Peoria street went to the prominent jeweller and bought a $200 locket "Want any inscription on it?" said the clerk "Yes. I want simple 'Alice' cut on in very plain, deep letters" "Want what?" "Want it inscribed simple Alice" "Sample Alice?" returned the clerk, who said subsequently that he couldn't believe his ears "Yes, simple 'Alice,'" replied the young man from Peoria street "All right, sir," said the clerk, adding, sotto voce "simple idiot."

On New Year's Eve the young man from Peoria street got the locket, in a neat casket, and at once forwarded it to the young lady on Ashland avenue On New Year's Day he called at her residence, and was astonished to discover that the young lady was not at home As he was, in thunderstruck amazement, standing on the rug the colored coachman approached him and handed him a package with the remark, "Now then young feller, yo' clah out of dyah!" and as the young fellow slowly went down the steps he beheld the young lady in the bay window, leaning on the arm of his hated rival, laughing heartily and pointing the finger of scorn at him On opening the parcel the young man from Peoria street found in it his letters and a casket wherein was a $200 locket, whereon was cut in plain deep letters, "Simple Alice"

And that is how the clerk of a South Side jeweller wears arnica under his left eye There is a handsome locket for sale at Lapman's below cost the fashionable wedding which was to have taken place between a young lady on Ashland avenue and a young man on Peoria street is off, and the jeweller's clerk has taken out a warrant for assault and battery against the young man on Peoria street

EUROPE BRISTLING WITH BAYONETS.—The military contributor of the Cologne Gazette compares the present strength of the German army with that of the armies of other leading European Powers At the beginning of 1875 the German army consisted of 31 830 officers, 1 329 600 men, 314 970 horses, 2,700 field guns and 820 siege guns Of these, the number of troops available for service in the field within six weeks after mobilization is (excluding the transport and staff corps) 710 130 men with 114,850 horses and 2 052 field guns These figures do not include the fourth battalions 400 officers and 152 100 men, formed in case of war, or the landsturm to be raised under the new law, which would bring into the field a force, by the lowest computation, of 3,718 officers and 202 500 men The total force at the disposal of Germany is therefore 38,948 officers and 1 084 200 men, excluding surgeons and the hospital corps, and not taking into account the probability that the estimated force of the landsturm will be greatly exceeded when in the field The strength of the Russian army, including the Don Cossacks, but excluding Caucasian and Asiatic troops is 1 176 860 men, of whom 761 000 are available for field service, the French army 1,008,400 men, of whom 665,700 are available for the field, the Austrian 865 000, including 562 750 field troops and reserves, the Italian 741 700 including 279 000 field troops and reserves, and the English (including militia, but excluding volunteers) 285,240, of whom 13 860 are the highest number available for the field without fresh enlistment From these figures Germany is the first military power in Europe The organization of the territorial army in France may ultimately increase the French army by from 480 000 to 520 000 men, but then Germany will have 100 000 more soldiers than France and by putting forth all her strength she might obtain 200 000 or 300 000 more It is also to be considered that even if the German army were raised to 1 800 000 men, it would consist almost entirely of well trained soldiers, which in France can only be the case as regards the territorial reserve in some twenty five years time

AN EVENT OF RARE OCCURRENCE.—President Grant gains one more day in office than the American elector bargained for The 4th of March 1877 will come on Sunday, and by statute the inauguration of the President elect does not take place until the next day Twice in the history of the Republic this has occurred—in 1821 at the second inauguration of James Monroe, and in 1849 when Zachary Taylor was installed

As indicated in our quotations the New York gold market [illegible] Europe [illegible] the Bank of France [illegible] from London to Paris on account of [illegible] the Bank of England [illegible] the week before [illegible] of £105 000 sterling Not [illegible] the Bank of England [illegible] not alter the rate of discount at their last weekly court while the market for Consols and American securities was comparatively strong If the outflow of bullion from the Bank of England was likely to create any serious disturbance of the English finances the conservative Bank of England managers would no doubt, before this have taken vigorous steps to check the same From all indications it does not seem probable that the balance of trade will be so much in our favor this year as last and as that is one of the standards by which the money market may be pretty safely predicted the future would seem to be fraught with more stringency in money matters than the year just gone The more conservative will therefore the safer policy of doing business upon which the panic of 1873 taught men to work will however not be forgotten in 1875 and the whole [illegible] but hardly learned [illegible] conserving element in our commercial interests for years to come

In local circles monetary affairs manifest but little activity and no material fluctuation There is some demand for loans and when accompanied by good collateral it is met on the usual terms Prime commercial paper is readily discounted at regular rates and is received with favor [illegible] comparatively few calls on the loan market except on their demand deposits

In the line of general trade there is the usual amount of activity and some orders of considerable importance are being filled so that the volume of business for the month in the aggregate will be quite up to and perhaps above an average February, though it hardly promises to make up to the total inactivity which prevailed during most of January The merchants in the interior are making remittances very promptly in some instances but still there is some complaint in this respect as the wholesale houses here are now at a point where the means to lay in spring stocks is very essential The range of prices for imported goods is not changed in any leading lines. Dry goods are in moderate supply at low figures, boots and shoes steady and groceries firm with an upward tendency in some leading articles

The Wheat Market.

The demoralization noticed heretofore for some weeks is still felt and some who handled the cereal pretty heavily early in the season have been almost entirely out of the market as far as making purchases are concerned as they cannot see any margin on more than $1 50 per cental with the foreign markets down to present figures and no probable contingencies whereon to hang the least hope of an advance There are however others who are ready buyers at $1 37½ for sound lots of a good grade of shipping wheat and we hear of one sale of 2 000 bushels to day at the last named figure while small lots do not find buyers so readily at that price Holders however are backward just at present and demand $1 40@1 45 We hear of one lot of 5,000 bushels offered on the boat at Albany at 75 cents per bushel and no taker The vessels here and at Astoria are rapidly filling up the Muriel Willy Rickmers and Windward will get off on Friday or Saturday the entire cargoes of the Troop and Larsee have gone forward to Astoria The Euterpe at the same place is nearly finished and the cargo of the Conflict is being sent down quite rapidly The bark Spirit of the Dawn which reached her berth this morning has commenced to discharge ballast and will begin to load on Friday Thus it will be seen that without further arrivals next week will find the river almost bare of grain vessels to load unless charters are effected for the Sussex Corsica Wetterhorn or Midas all of which we believe are on the market but exporters seem slow to take them up

We notice that the commercial writer for our morning contemporary estimates that 40 000 tons are in sight in the valley but some good judges deem the figures much too high and we hardly think that after the vessels now in this port and at Astoria have loaded there will be more than 20 000 tons in sight in this valley In this there are probably [illegible] 000 tons or more that may be counted as sure to be held over until next harvest unless a very material advance should occur prior to that time There are perhaps 10 000 tons more in this valley which must pass through this port if shipped at all and fully one half of this will be marketed without the rise spoken of Hence we have in round numbers as the probable export to be made this season yet not to exceed 20 000 tons and we will be surprised should the cargoes to be loaded reach 25 000 tons after the vessels now in port and loading have sailed That the tonnage reported on the way here will be more than ample to carry all the surplus there can be no doubt and any scarcity of ships will be owing to failure to arrive on time
